I think Koresh may be using his computer with a cell phone to read this news group. I recall about a week or so ago that NBC reported that korech's followers were resorting to 'primitive morse code'.
He probably had one his followers learn morse code after following the thread. I don't think he would be to worried about running up large bills on his cellular phone account(s)since he will be spending the rest of his life in prison!

On a recent vacation on St. Thomas I sat in the sun talking on my HT. Many of my QSOs were with people from cruise ships that were docked in the harbor. Two questions of legality came to mind:

1) During one QSO the op was excited about all the DX he had worked with his HT while he was docked in the ports of non-US islands (British VI, Dutch VI). Since he was not in international waters and had not gotten reciprocal licensing, was he breaking their laws?

2) Many of the ships had registry in countries other than the US, even though their trips began and ended in US ports. Whose rules apply on those ships when they are in international waters?

>are weenies! By "us", i mean the fraternal (probably isn't a word either) >brotherhood of hamradio!

Charlie, where I live women can get licenses too, and I consider them to be vital parts of the Amateur Community.

Ok, I propose a contest to see who can come up with the longest sentence composed entirely of words that aren't.

Ready, begin.
